She was a passenger in a sedan driven by Tom Karandis, 47, Gardena. Driver of the other car was Robert L. Merrival, 22, Lynwood.

A Closer Look

By Ernest Kreiling

HOLLYWOOD—Most people like most television most of the time. This is a broad conclusion that can be drawn from a recently published study that probed the public's attitudes toward television.

Although there is a general satisfaction with TV today, there is also a notable lack of enthusiasm toward it and there are several sources of outright irritation expressed by the people interviewed.

The People Look at Television (Alfred Knopf, New York, $7.95) was written by Gary A. Steiner and is based on a study undertaken by the Bureau of Applied Social Research at Columbia University under a grant from the Columbia Broadcasting System. The data regarding attitudes toward television were accumulated in 2,498 depth interviews with adults in all parts of the country during March and April of 1960, a fact to be kept in mind three years later.

THE BOOK provides ample ammunition for broadcasters who have traditionally claimed we are getting what we want, or at least liking what we get. But the report also underscores some dangers to broadcasters that may eventually shake up any complacency into which they might be lulled.

The People Look at Television generally confirms findings of other recent communications research, but by right of its breadth and depth it is a source of information and insight to be reckoned with.

The American viewing audience considers TV programs on the whole good, that is, better than satisfactory. "He would like TV to be more informative and educational but certainly not at the expense of entertainment," because, "he rarely uses the TV set as a deliberate source of information, and he is extremely unlikely to turn on serious and informative public affairs presentations, even if he's watching while they are on the air."

THE GREATEST concern expressed by the respondents was not only that there are too many interruptive commercials, but that many are too boring, repetitious, and insulting.

As might be expected the attitudes of the American viewer become less favorable and more critical as his formal education increases. On the other hand the more highly educated viewers are even more enthusiastic about "their favorite" programs than the less educated.

And being less impressed with television generally, they claim greater selectivity in their viewing. However, the study uncovered evidence to cast some doubt on their claimed selectivity, and suggested, "it appears they too watch a great deal but feel worse about it."

THE DESIRE for Pay TV or for commercial-less TV isn't as wide spread as we're sometimes led to believe. In fact 75 per cent of the people said commercials are a fair price to pay for entertainment. Consequently there's no grass roots movement afoot to scuttle our commercial system of broadcasting, just massive resistance to the manner in which the commercialism is utilized.

Looking back over the short history of television people were most apt to recall favorably the great comics that TV has brought to the public, and they generally hope for their return, a finding interestingly anticipated by CBS in this season's programs in its plans for next season.

As the great debate over television continues in the coming few years, The People Look at Television will certainly become a widely quoted authority, not because it supports any special viewpoint, but because in its 422 pages there's ammunition for almost every shade of opinion.

Tamest Horse Finally Bolts

Children climbing all over him most of the day never bothered a horse here in Torrance. He just stood there quietly and never even wined.

But something finally "got to him." Somebody stole his money. What's a horse doing with money? This particular horse is a pony ride horse at Rolling Hills Plaza and someone broke into his coin box.

Know Your Traffic Laws

Prepared in cooperation with the Traffic Education Bureau of the Torrance Police Department

Total Accident, 1962 1,150 Accidents to Feb. 1, 1963 96

Jaywalking is the term applied to the act of a pedestrian crossing a street in an area not designed for pedestrian traffic—such as in mid-block. It is not only dangerous to the pedestrian, it often leads to serious accidents.

Each year, many persons are killed or seriously injured as a result of accidents involving vehicles and pedestrians. In our own city of Torrance, progress has been made in this area, and during 1961, Torrance received an award from the National Safety Council for its pedestrian safety program. Jaywalking continues, however, to be a matter of concern.

MANY PEDESTRIAN violations are observed each week, and in many cases a near accident is perhaps as congested as any area of the city and each day pedestrians can be seen walking from behind parked vehicles, causing traffic to stop or slow down to avoid an impact.

Most busy intersections in Torrance have painted crosswalks in addition to electric signal pedestrian controls to assist the person on foot.

It may, at times, seem inconvenient to walk an additional 25 or 50 feet to get to a corner, but it is well worth those additional few steps. Accidents don't just happen, but in almost all cases are caused by human failure.

ACCIDENTS happen quickly and often are nearly impossible to avoid because of the limited time element involved. Most of us don't realize that several times each week we are no more than a second or two from becoming involved in an accident, and as a pedestrian, we don't have much protection.

A few simple rules, if obeyed, will do much to reduce the possibility of being struck by a vehicle. The rules certainly will set a proper example for the children to follow. When your children see you jaywalking or walk in a manner contrary to that being taught them at school, it makes the teaching of good safety habits to the students difficult.

SOME TESTED rules for pedestrian safety include: Cross streets only at corners, using crosswalks. Obey all traffic signals and signs, paying particular attention to those equipped with pedestrian controls. Walk on sidewalks, not on the roadway. Where there are no sidewalks, walk on the shoulder of the road facing oncoming traffic. If walking at night, wear light-colored clothing.

Never stand in roadway and hitchhike. As a pedestrian, there are obligations required of you just as of the driver of a vehicle. Know these obligations and respect them.

Walk as though your life depended upon it... It does!
